DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.
2. Claim 2 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.
 - a. Claim 2 recites the limitation "the FEs" in step (c). There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.
4. Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ayandeh (US 6069895, "Ayandeh") in view of Iwata (US 6108708, "Iwata").

Regarding claim 1, Ayandeh discloses a device comprising:

- at least one interface module (a plurality of line cards, see 48 fig.2 and col.7, ln.3-4) having a plurality of forward engines distributed and installed therein (forwarding engine and routing table, see 48 fig.2), each of the plurality of forward engines changing internal connection information to received internal connection information (VPI/VCI operation, see col.6, ln.1-11) and performing a connection operation (virtual connections, see col.6, ln.1-11);

- a controller (a central controller, see 46 fig.2 and col.7, ln.2) for allocating virtual path identifiers (VPIs) between the plurality of forward engines (VPIs in the routing table used by forwarding engine, see col.6, ln.1-11), the controller storing and managing information on virtual path identifiers (storing VPIs in the routing table used by forwarding table, see col.6, ln.1-11), managing internal connection information based on VPI information (stored VCI and VPI values, see col.6, ln.1-11), and providing the plurality of forward engines with managed internal connection information (the central controller provides updated routing information, see col.7, ln.63-67); and

- a switch (a switch fabric, see 42 fig.2) for switching a message packet between the plurality of forward engines (switch packets based on routing information in forwarding engines, see col.2, ln.46-48).

Ayandeh does not explicitly disclose the limitation of "allocating VPI according to an expression: $VPI\ number = (self\ forward\ engine\ number + relative\ forward\ engine\ number) \% total\ number\ of\ the\ forward\ engines$ ". That is, Ayandeh fails to disclose the method of predetermining VPI values.

However, Iwata discloses the method of predetermining VPI numbers for fast VC establishment (see col.1, ln.42-44 and also title)." Since the reason for the VPI calculation method according to the expression is not defined in the claim, the particular calculation method does not affect the patentable operability of the invention. The VPI predetermining method depends on the system designer since it appears another calculation method would work equally well. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of applicant's invention to apply the method of predetermining VPI numbers taught by Iwata into the routing table of Ayandeh in order to establish VC connection fast and efficiently by using the predetermined VPI values.

Allowable Subject Matter

5. Claim 2 would be allowable if rewritten or amended to overcome the rejection(s) under 35 U.S.C. 112, 2nd paragraph, set forth in this Office action.
6. Claims 3-6 are allowed.
